6. Colours

- 6.1. There are several factors that may contribute to color variations. Depending on the base materials, colored material itself, country where the product was manufactured or even the availability of materials or possible woods in certain countries, there may be a colour difference between input codes and output colours. While distinction is often indistinguishable, once a while there may be obvious differences. With this in mind, JSPR forbids any returns on the basis of color matching problems.
- 6.2. Products suited with Realskin® coating material are generally considered to be UV resistant; there is a possibility that long-term exposure to sunlight might result in a light discoloration of the coating.
- 6.3. Dye and ink from blue jeans, plastic bags etc. can transfer to products or possible finishes.

7. Warranty

7.9. JSPR's Realskin® coating has passed water-, sun-, cold- and dry-heat tests, which all show no change in flexibility or durability. Because of different weather conditions and air humidity, it is possible that the wood used in these items is going to swell, which can lead to small lines or irregularities underneath and on top of the surface. Although the two-component lacquer used on these items is of high quality, swelling of the wood is a natural cause and JSPR cannot be held responsible for any damage or irregularities in these items. Although JSPR stands behind their products and the possibility of the above mentioned flaw is very small, JSPR offers a free (excl. Shipment) touch-up set to repair the furniture when necessary.
